INTERNATIONAL LABOUR STANDARDS FOR CONSTITUENTS

16 NOVEMBER – 18 DECEMBER 2020
asso 5 WEEKS, 2 DAYS/WEEK

Information Note
BACKGROUND AND RATIONALE

One of the International Labour Organization’s (ILO) oldest and most important functions is the setting of ILS, which are adopted by the tripartite International Labour Conference and take the form of Conventions, Recommendations and Protocols. Conventions are international treaties that are open to ratification by member States. By ratifying them, member States formally undertake to make their provisions effective, both in law and in practice, and to report on their application at regular intervals. Recommendations are non-binding instruments which provide guidance for national policy, legislation and practice. Protocols are partial and optional revisions or amendments of earlier Conventions. Since the foundation of the ILO in 1919, 190 Conventions, 206 Recommendations and 6 Protocols have been adopted.

ILS are tripartite and universal in character. They are essentially expression of tripartite agreements and are applicable at world level. At the same time, ILS reflect the fact that countries have diverse cultural and historical backgrounds, legal systems, and levels of economic development.

ILS cover a wide range of subjects in the world of work, namely freedom of association, collective bargaining and industrial relations; forced labour; child labour; equality of opportunity and treatment; tripartite consultation; labour administration and inspection; employment policy and promotion; vocational guidance and training; employment security; wages; working time; occupational safety and health; social security; maternity protection; social policy; migrant workers; HIV/AIDS; seafarers; fishers; dockworkers; indigenous and tribal peoples; and specific categories of workers.

Once ILS are adopted, member States are required under the ILO Constitution to submit them to the competent national authority (normally the parliament) on appropriate action. In the case of Conventions, this means consideration for ratification. More than 8,200 ratifications have been registered so far.

The ILO has developed mechanisms for monitoring the application of ILS in law and practice. These mechanisms, which are unique at the international level, are based on the evaluation by independent experts of the manner in which obligations are complied with and on the examination of cases by the ILO’s bodies. If problems in the application of ILS persist, the ILO seeks to assist countries through social dialogue and technical assistance.
