OVERVIEW

The hybrid Global Facilitator Training, starts with a creative Sprint where facilitators and trainers from around the world co-design the Global Facilitator Profile—the skills, values, and mindset that define excellence in facilitation. Through design thinking and collaboration, participants will prototype ideas to nurture the Training, an advanced pathway for facilitators to operate in multicultural settings, with a coaching mindset and to promote (human) development.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Combining virtual engagement with an intensive face-to-face participation, the Global Facilitator Training brings together facilitators and trainers from across regions.

During the Sprint (Day 1), participants will collaborate through design thinking to explore what it means to be a global facilitator capable of driving transformative learning. The experience culminates in a final pitching session, where teams will present innovative prototypes that will inform the design of the Global Facilitator Training (Day 2-3-4).

The Facilitator Training offers an advanced pathway for facilitators to operate in multicultural settings. The Training combines high-level facilitation skills with a strong emphasis on social justice, development cooperation principles, diversity and inclusion, emotional intelligence, coaching models and the ability to foster engaging, respectful learning environment.

Participation is open both face-to-face and online, allowing a truly global community of facilitators to learn, co-create, and exchange in real time.

This training not only strengthens facilitation capacity but also reinforces the ILO's commitment to social justice, development cooperation, diversity and inclusion, and emotional intelligence as the foundational pillars of effective global learning.

WHO

WHO TAKES THIS COURSE?

The Global Facilitator Training is designed for professionals involved in facilitation, learning, and capacity development within international and multicultural settings, including:

- Facilitators and trainers working in development cooperation, social dialogue, or capacity-building programmes
- ILO staff and professionals from UN agencies, international organizations, and partner institutions engaged in learning and training delivery
- Consultants and resource persons supporting workshops, training, or participatory processes at global, regional, or national levels
- Learning and development specialists seeking to enhance their facilitation skills for diverse and inclusive environments
- Project coordinators and technical officers who lead multi-stakeholder or cross-cultural initiatives requiring facilitation and engagement skills
- Academics and educators interested in facilitation methodologies, innovation, and experiential learning approaches
- Social partners (employers' and workers' representatives) involved in dialogue, negotiation, and learning initiatives

WHAT

WHAT WILL YOU LEARN?

This will be your opportunity to:

- Connect with and be inspired by trainers and facilitators from across the globe, transforming diverse country experiences into fresh ideas and innovative solutions.
- Immerse yourself in a truly multicultural learning environment and strengthen your intercultural facilitation skills through practice and exchange.
- Harness emotional intelligence to create more impactful, inclusive, and human-centred learning experiences.
- Adopt a coaching mindset that elevates your facilitation and empowers others to grow.
- Explore visual language, cutting-edge methodologies, and powerful technologies, and build the confidence to apply what works best for you and the communities you serve.

HYBRID

Join - in person or online – to work with expert trainers and facilitators from around the world. Experience innovative (digital and non) facilitation to exchange ideas, inspire one another, and learn from peers who face similar challenges while managing diverse solutions.

INNOVATION LAB

Experiment with methods and technologies in the ITCILO Innovation Lab, where serious dynamics bring the joy back into learning.

FACILITATION FOR DEVELOPMENT

Learn how to embed ethics and values by combining high-level facilitation skills with a strong emphasis on social justice, development cooperation principles, diversity and inclusion, emotional intelligence, coaching models, and interculturalism.

WHAT TOPICS DOES THIS COURSE COVER?

This Programme offers a deep dive into the facilitation cycle, but not only. Starting with a design thinking exercise which enables the profiling of the global facilitator, and embedding the essential principles of strategic facilitation, it focuses on:

1. Hybrid Facilitation

Ensuring equity between online and in-person participants

- How will you ensure equal voice and visibility across modalities?
- What concrete design choices support participation for everyone?
- How will online and in-person experiences stay connected and synchronous?

2. Emotional Intelligence

Seeing and working with the human dimension

- What emotions might be present (spoken or unspoken)?
- What needs, fears, or expectations could be behind participants' behaviours?
- How will you acknowledge emotions without judging or fixing them?
- How can you guide your participants from emotional awareness to management with a view of helping them to upgrade their social skills?

3. Coaching Mindset

Supporting reflection, ownership, and growth

- What powerful questions could help the group reflect?
- How will you encourage accountability without controlling the process?
- What space will you create for individual insight and collective learning?
- How can you support people to unlock their potential?

4. Intercultural Facilitation

Working with difference through curiosity and humility

- What cultural dynamics may be influencing participation, silence, or conflict?
- What assumptions (yours or the group's) need to be questioned?
- How will you foster acceptance, tolerance, and integration?
