MANAGING A JUST TRANSITION TO ENVIRONMENTALLY SUSTAINABLE ECONOMIES AND SOCIETIES

LOW-CARBON AND CLIMATE-RESILIENT DEVELOPMENT

OVERVIEW

Since the adoption of the Paris Agreement in 2015 – whose preamble explicitly refers to the just transition – countries are striving to manage the transition to sustainable economies in a fair and productive way. Reconciling decarbonisation of the economy with social justice is not an easy task. While the greening of economies brings many opportunities to achieve social objectives, the required economic restructuring also presents enormous challenges for enterprises, workers and the economy at large.

Internationally, progress has been made towards a clear political recognition of the challenge. In 2015, the International Labour Organization developed Guidelines for a just transition. In essence, the focus is on policy dialogue and coherence in order to design and implement country-specific macroeconomic, industrial, labour and skills policies that help enterprises prosper, generate decent jobs and protect vulnerable groups in the green economy.

WHAT

WHAT TOPICS DOES THIS COURSE COVER?

This course seeks to strengthen institutional and individual capacities to support a just transition to environmentally sustainable economies and societies, linking three topics:

- Green jobs
- Just transition
- Social justice

Course content is guided by the ILO Guidelines for a Just Transition: a framework and practical tool for tackling the employment and social dimensions of sustainable development, climate change and other environmental challenges.

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

Participants will acquire knowledge on the sustainable development framework, in particular the link between environmental challenges and the world of work. The course is an opportunity to review concepts, global practices and national experiences in promoting a just transition. Participants deepen their knowledge of the key topics with the guidance of international development experts:

- How the environment and the world of work are linked within the sustainable development framework
- Global best practices on policies reconciling the transition to the green economy with inclusive job-rich growth
- Case studies and lessons learnt from countries applying just transition principles and strategies

WHAT WILL I BE ABLE TO DO?

This course enables participants to develop solutions to complex problems, creating more sustainable societies:

- Use international guidelines to manage the transition to low-carbon economies
- Develop and implement effective policies and strategies to create decent jobs in the green economy
- Develop just transition initiatives based on international good practices and lessons learnt
