CAREER DEVELOPMENT SUPPORT IN CHANGING LABOUR MARKETS

30 OCTOBER – 8 DECEMBER 2023

 6 WEEKS, 5 HOURS/WEEK

CAREER DEVELOPMENT SUPPORT IN CHANGING LABOUR MARKETS

POLICIES AND PRACTICES IN CAREER GUIDANCE, CAREER EDUCATION AND CAREER DEVELOPMENT SUPPORT FOR WORKERS

OVERVIEW

In times of changing labour markets, rapid technological developments and recovery from COVID-19, career development support is becoming increasingly important for people to manage the frequent and complex transitions within and between learning and work they face. At the same time, career development support services are challenged to provide better access and innovative ways of delivery to both youth and adults in a lifelong learning perspective. Career development support includes activities such as:

- Career guidance for all, and especially for unemployed and inactive
- Career education in schools, TVET institutes, universities and adult learning institutions
- Career development support for workers.

Join us online to get new insights and innovative examples around the world on how to make career development support more effective!

WHAT

WHAT TOPICS DOES THIS COURSE COVER?

The course provides practical guidance on how to develop, implement and improve career development support systems in education, training, labour market services, and support for workers (formally employed, informal work, self-employed).

- Key elements of career development support systems such as coordination, staffing, financing and use of technology
- Typical challenges faced by national stakeholders in establishing those key elements
- Potential solutions to address existing challenges, with reference to international experience.

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

Participants will have the opportunity to discuss with world-class experts and their peers how to enhance and/or develop career development support systems in the context of employment services, education and training institutions, and with regards to career development support for workers. In particular, participants will learn:

- how to adapt career development support systems and services to global developments impacting on education and training systems and the labour markets
- how key elements of career development support systems could be achieved, from coordination, to funding, quality, access, and use of technology
- how career development support is linked to the UN Sustainable Development Goals and can contribute to wider public policy goals in education, lifelong learning, employment and social inclusion.

WHAT WILL I BE ABLE TO DO?

The course aims to empower participants in shaping career development support systems, policies and services in their country and respective institution. It enables them to:

- Better understand how to adapt support systems and services to global challenges
- Test and apply innovative approaches of career development support in their country
- Prioritize and plan how to implement measures that strengthen national career development support systems.

WHY

WHY SHOULD I JOIN?

There are at least three strong reasons why you should not miss this course:

- Career development support is becoming more important than ever in the context of fundamental and rapid changes in the labour markets and will play a key role during economic recovery.
- Career development support is often a missing or weak link between education and the labour markets and therefore needs to be strengthened in many countries.
- This new e-learning course consists of a blend of online resources, 'real time' interactive sessions led by ILO specialists and ITCILO experienced trainers, individual and collaborative group exercises using our eCampus platform.

WHO

WHO TAKES THIS COURSE?

- High level technical staff and service directors/managers (from ministries, education agencies or SME agencies and other institutions in the field of education, higher education, TVET and employment services)
- Representatives of employers' and workers' organizations, as well as NGOs, with a role on planning and organizing career development support services.
