A five-day new media journey

This course takes a practical approach to communication to effect change. It brings together professionals, academics, and creatives, providing a collaborative space to share ideas and explore new ones.

Participants come up with creative ways to communicate about pressing issues, including migration, climate change, sexual harassment, and the future of work.

Are you ready to collaborate with 40 bright communication minds?
Any questions? Email us at c4d@itcilo.org

Key features

CREATIVE PROJECTS Last year's participants created communication campaigns from scratch	HIGH-LEVEL RESOURCES Discuss relevant topics with digital media experts from the UN and other international organizations	PARTICIPATE Enjoy inspiring conversations, interactive sessions, and communication labs	INNOVATE Get familiar with the latest tools that boost communication efforts
---	---	---	--

"This course provided a structured path forward for my department's fundraising and communication work."

— Parth Kanitkar
RESOURCE MOBILIZATION OFFICER, ILO

What topics does this course cover?

In this course, participants come up with practical solutions to today's big challenges. This course is perfect for anyone interested in how communication is changing the way we deal with complex topics.

- Visual storytelling
- Advocacy communication
- Technology-enhanced development

What will I learn?

Participants discover the impact of high-quality visuals on communication products. The key to effective communication is a combination of strategic thinking and high-quality outputs.

- Creative-yet-strategic multi-platform campaigns
- Social media and the storytelling approach
- New digital tools behind today's best communication efforts

What will I be able to do?

Participants practice crafting stories in unique ways. Projects call for problem-solving, prototyping, and experimenting with out-of-the-box techniques.

- Tell meaningful and engaging stories that stand out, both online and offline
- Build empathy, trust, and understanding when working on a new project
- Develop communication approaches that consider cultural differences and multiple audiences' needs

Why should I join?

This course is for those who are already working in communication but want to learn new skills, those who are interested but haven't yet started, and those who need specific guidance.

- Effective communication is the antidote to information overload.
- The trainers are international experts in communication, training, and development.
- Participants flex their creativity through collaborative projects, hands-on exercises, and communication labs.

Who attends this course?

Participants from different countries, backgrounds, and careers learn and work together on a United Nations campus.

- Communication officers
- Development professionals
- Policy-makers
- Academics
- Creatives

Who are the trainers?

- Rosalind Yarde - Chief of News and Media, ILO
- Renzo Giusti - Senior Designer, Experientia
- Sverre Øygarden Eikill - Communication Advisor, SAIH

What tools will I use?

Figma

An industry-standard design tool for creating simple website prototypes called wireframes

InVision

A powerful tool that helps UX professionals create interactive website prototypes to test with real users

Highlights from last year

Last year's participants worked on:

- A mobile game to stop street harassment in India

Get ahead with contemporary courses

8 ELECTIVE COURSES
A multitude of topics to fit different interests

2 STUDY VISITS
Experience-based learning, rooted in reality

1 GLOBAL DEBATE
Meaningful questions, informed responses

What topics does the Summer School cover?

For its 100th anniversary, the ILO is inviting young people from all over the world to the Summer School and Global Debate on the Future of Work. The Summer School will provide participants with the tools they need to help shape new strategies and policies that deliver economic security, equal opportunity, and social justice.

- Digital economy
- Youth employment challenges
- Decent Work and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development

What will I learn?

Discover the impact of technology on jobs, as well as the risks and opportunities for governments, businesses, and people that follow.

- Insights into the jobs of tomorrow
- Fair transitions to environmental sustainability
- How to regulate the platform economy

What will I be able to do?

There is a real need to understand and react to the changing employment landscape, so we can work toward a better future of work.

- Represent the country of your choice and deliver speeches in the Global Debate
- Expand your business in an international game
- Examine trends and practice your future foresight skills in a workshop

"The Summer School was a formative early career experience. It was fantastic to gain practical insight and think about the bigger picture of youth employment and decent work."

— Alejandra Ortega
STANFORD UNIVERSITY, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES

Why should I join?

The Turin Centre is known for its unconventional and innovative learning and training methods.

- In 2017, the ILO created the Global Commission on the Future of Work to identify and work through the most relevant challenges.
- The Summer School includes two days of debate, simulating the proceedings of a UN summit.
- Choose from eight elective courses, covering topics such as fair migration, skills for the future, and the social economy.

Who attends the Summer School?

Participants from different countries, backgrounds, and careers learn and work together on a United Nations campus.

- Leaders of youth sectors of employers and workers organizations
- Young people with leadership positions in academia and civil society

ILO Global Commission

The ILO created a special commission in 2017 to identify what's changing the world of work, how these changes affect workers, and how to keep up. In early 2019, the commission presented its human-centered agenda, entitled "Delivering the Social Contract," which calls for increased investments in:

- People's capabilities
- Institutions of work
- Decent and sustainable work

Agenda highlights

- Field visit to study the impact of technology on work and production
- Fishbowl discussion on common priorities within theories of change
- Plenary meetings on trends, scenario mapping, theories of change, and more

Format

- UN-style debate
- Collaborative electives
- Future foresight workshop

Free time

- Guided tour of Turin
- Shopping trip to Le Gru
- Weekend excursion to Venice

Requirements

- Bachelor's degree or equivalent
- English level C2 or equivalent

Common questions

Why is this course relevant today?

Given the prevalence of technologies and the amount of data available in the online world about users, products, and the content that we generate, businesses can be making so much more well-informed decisions if this vast amount of data was more deeply analyzed through the use of data science.

LABOUR STANDARDS

Legally-established rights at work, backed by governments, employers, and workers

We support knowledge, skills, and capacity development in promotion of international labour standards and rights at work.

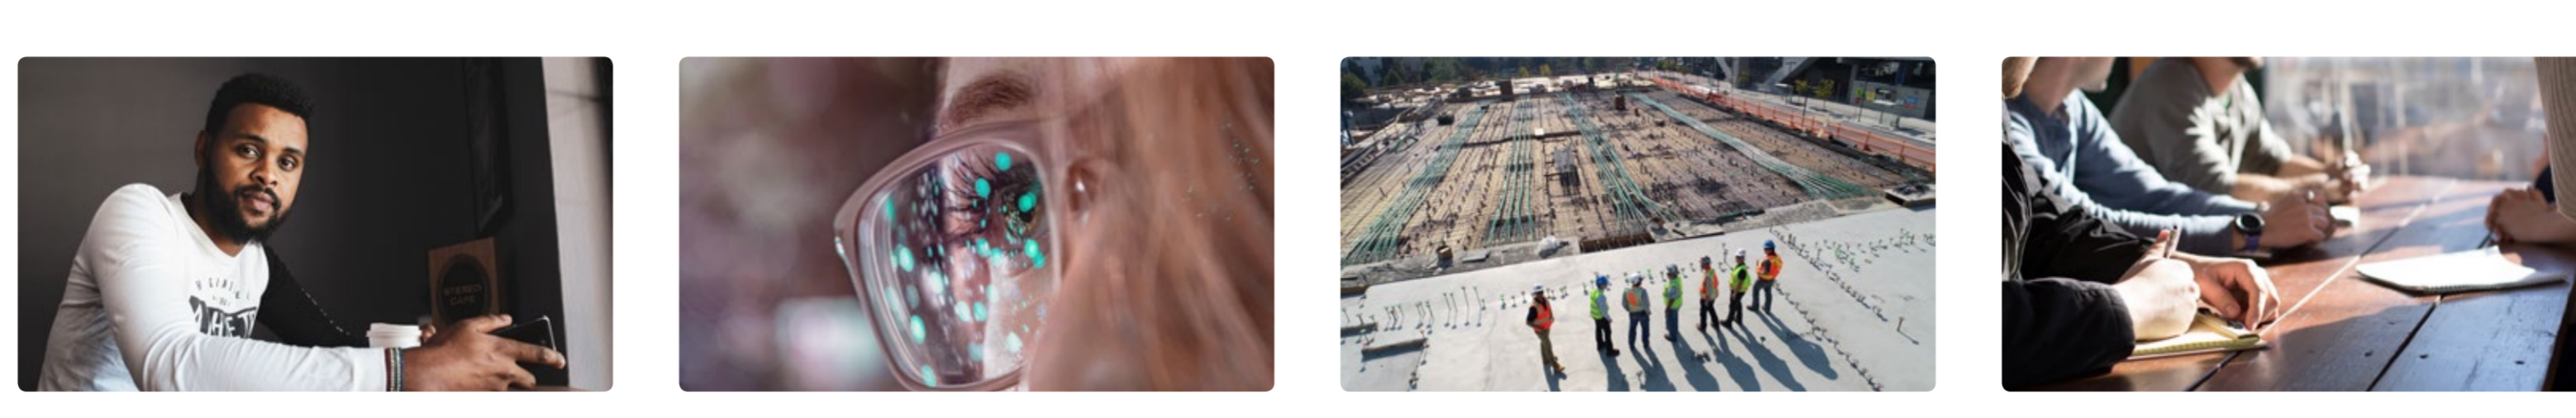

Decent work for all women and men starts with a solid foundation. Labour standards and rights lay the groundwork for a more fair and equitable future. At the Turin Centre, we offer practical training activities for constituents, staff, partners, and other actors from all over the world who are working for better labour standards.

Meet Gertrude, making sustainability a reality in Bulawayo

In Zimbabwe, farmers spark local development through green agricultural practices

APRIL 29, 2019

Gertrude Kachere has been farming for almost 40 years. She and her husband own two hectares at home in Bulawayo, as well as a 12-hectare property near Harare. Schoolteachers by training, the pair started growing crops in 1979 to supplement their incomes. It was a hobby at first, mostly. Then they doubled down and diversified, expanding to horticulture, poultry, and ranching. Now, their name is well-known. They've supplied local shops and markets for decades and have made a considerable contribution to Bulawayo's economy.

“People were not interested, at first, but they have come to realize that there is life in the soil.”

However, their success story is unusual. Zimbabwe's economy has been stagnant for years, and enterprises have little incentive to make the switch to sustainable operations. A series of development problems are roadblocks in the path toward a green economy: persistent gender inequality, an outdated education system, and the popularity of polluting inputs.

A house with a farm

Gertrude met her husband in college. He had always been interested in farming, always supplied his family with home-grown food, and always wanted to own a house with a farm. In 1979, during the ceasefire and final year of the Rhodesian Bush War, they bought their first property. As their business grew, Gertrude was surprised by her own enthusiasm for it. They would wake up at 4 a.m. to finish their farm work before the school day began. One small patch of land became two. She recruited and trained dozens of farmhands. She even worked alone, sometimes, since her husband taught at faraway schools.

“Being able to contribute to the sustenance and well-being of fellow Zimbabweans in this part of the country makes me feel rejuvenated.”

Small-scale sustainability

Gertrude and her husband are not just entrepreneurs. They are small business owners in Zimbabwe's nascent green economy, and they utilize sustainable and socially-inclusive farming practices. Some of those practices include composting organic materials, which they use instead of fertilizer, and intercropping, to maximize the available space. She also employs workers from a nearby squatter camp. The work of training them can be difficult, as they are rarely skilled in farming, but is ultimately rewarding. “We reciprocate, they help me, and I give them what I can.” Still, there are limits to how much entrepreneurs can accomplish alone. She believes that government-supplied solar panels would change peoples' lives for the better.

Making ends meet

Gertrude describes her job as rewarding yet challenging. It can be difficult to reconcile the delight of a successful harvest with the reality of the local market.

“During these past two months, inputs have been very expensive, the price of fertilizer has increased from 35 to 75 dollars, and even 100 dollars at one time.”

Meanwhile, profits remain steady or dip slightly over the seasons. Lately, it has been hard for Gertrude to make ends meet. That's why the ILO created the Green enterPRIZE initiative. The project seeks to address the high levels of youth employment, low levels of formal and growth-oriented enterprises, and unsustainable production processes prevalent in small- and medium-sized enterprises in Zimbabwe. Through an annual competition, the ILO hopes to identify green, growth-oriented enterprise owners from all over the country. The prize? Technical and business development support from the ILO's strategic partners. Long term, this plan will strengthen sustainable practices in small businesses, and make the case for Zimbabwe to go green.

In 1979, during the ceasefire and final year of the Rhodesian Bush War, they bought their first property. As their business grew, Gertrude was surprised by her own enthusiasm for it. They would wake up at 4 a.m. to finish their farm work before the school day began. One small patch of land became two. She recruited and trained dozens of farmhands. She even worked alone, sometimes, since her husband taught at faraway schools.

"Being able to contribute to the sustenance and well-being of fellow Zimbabweans in this part of the country makes me feel rejuvenated."

Gertrude describes her job as rewarding yet challenging. It can be difficult to reconcile the delight of a successful harvest with the reality of the local market.

SMALL-SCALE SUSTAINABILITY

Gertrude and her husband are not just entrepreneurs. They are small business owners in Zimbabwe's nascent green economy, and they utilize sustainable and socially-inclusive farming practices. Some of those practices include composting organic materials, which they use instead of fertilizer, and intercropping, to maximize the available space. She also employs workers from a nearby squatter camp. The work of training them can be difficult, as they are rarely skilled in farming, but is ultimately rewarding. "We reciprocate, they help me, and I give them what I can." Still, there are limits to how much entrepreneurs can accomplish alone. She believes that government-supplied solar panels would change peoples' lives for the better.

"Solar panels are too expensive to install, but they would save us money."

NAMSDA RODER PERCENTAGE

PIS SIMOLOR SED MAXIM VOLUPTAS RECEPTIAM

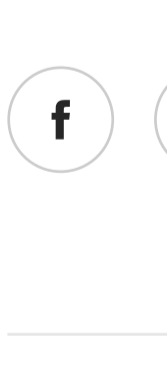

UME QUI ASPED MAGNIMUS SIN ET AUTEM.

NE DOLOREM DITATIB USANTIS PRO QUATUR

Meanwhile, profits remain steady or dip slightly over the seasons. Lately, it has been hard for Gertrude to make ends meet. That's why the ILO created the Green enterPRIZE initiative. The project seeks to address the high levels of youth employment, low levels of formal and growth-oriented enterprises, and unsustainable production processes prevalent in small- and medium-sized enterprises in Zimbabwe. Through an annual competition, the ILO hopes to identify green, growth-oriented enterprise owners from all over the country. The prize? Technical and business development support from the ILO's strategic partners. Long term, this plan will strengthen sustainable practices in small businesses, and make the case for Zimbabwe to go green.

YOUNG PEOPLE THINKING AHEAD

For its 100th anniversary, the ILO is inviting young people from all over the world to a summer event on the future of work.

Our vision for the future of work

This initiative aims to ignite innovative dialogues, training, capacity building support, and knowledge management connected to the Future of Work. This virtual space serves as an aggregated entry point for projects, ideas, and reflections related to the Future of Work project at the ITCILO.

It is rooted in four guiding pillars:

- 1 Dialogue events, connected to the initiative's thematic priorities;
- 2 Training events in Turin, Geneva, or in the field;
- 3 Knowledge management facility, integrating all resources used in dialogue and training events;
- 4 Innovation fund, supporting experiential learning modalities.

We are the training arm of the International Labour Organization

The International Training Centre is a vocational training institution in the heart of a riverside park in Turin, Italy. Founded in 1964 by the International Labour Organization and the Government of Italy, the Centre's mission is to achieve decent work for all women and men.

The Centre is dedicated to the pursuit of learning and training to achieve Sustainable Development Goal 8: "Promote inclusive and sustainable economic growth, employment, and decent work for all."

The Centre offers learning, knowledge-sharing, and institutional capacity-building programmes for governments, workers' and employers' organizations, and development partners. It aims to be a forum where development intersects with all forms of knowledge in the world of work, from tripartism to technology. As a multicultural hub for learning, the Centre welcomes everyone, regardless of gender, race, or class.

Relevance. Quality. Impact.

These are the core elements of the Centre's training programmes. The Centre delivers more than just a classroom. Professional trainers guide participants through a learning journey, featuring workshops, study visits, and the latest educational technologies.

- Whistleblower Protection

The Centre is committed to transparency and accountability throughout its operations.

The Ethics Officer of the ILO works independently and aims to foster a culture of integrity within the organization, including the ITCILO.

Specific responsibilities include:

- Consultation. Upon request, the Ethics Officer provides confidential guidance to Human Resources Services, as well as individual managers and staff members, to ensure that all policies, procedures, and practices adhere to ethical standards. However, the Ethics Officer does not receive reports of misconduct nor resolve grievances in cases of conflict.
- Promotion. The Ethics Officer works with Human Resources Services to design and promote programmes that increase staff members' awareness of ethical issues. All staff comply with the Standards of Conduct for the International Civil Service, as well as other documents regarding duties and procedures.
- Whistleblower protection. If a staff member believes that action has been taken against them for reporting misconduct or cooperating with an audit or investigation, the Ethics Officer conducts a fair and transparent preliminary review. If necessary, the Ethics Officer refers the case to Human Resources Services for disciplinary action.

Martin Oelz serves as Ethics Officer of the ILO since 1 February 2016. He can be reached at:

On campus, you can do more. Stay up-to-date with all the latest social and cultural events on campus. Sign up for our email newsletter here and never miss a beat.

IN THE CAMPUS

- Musical entertainment makes the coffee lounge a popular place to meet and relax in the evenings.
- Although all study/bedrooms have cable television, the TV lounge fills up when major sports events are on.
- We have facilities and equipment for you to play football, tennis and table tennis.
- You can keep fit for work or sport in the campus gym. An instructor runs a group session three evenings a week, and you are always welcome to use the exercise equipment.

OUTSIDE

- Every weekend, you can join an excursion to a major tourist destination like Venice, Florence, Pisa or Monte Carlo, as well as a shorter trip to places like the Italian lakes, Milan or Portofino.
- Almost every week there is a sightseeing tour of Turin, a museum visit and a shopping expedition.
- The City of Turin has created two websites (in 5 languages) to provide tourist information and news of forthcoming events: www.inpiemonteintorino.it and www.turismotorino.org. Full information about places of worship is on hand.

Labour administration and labour inspection

Labour migration

Social dialogue, tripartism and labour law

Social protection

Our world is increasingly globalized. Migration and climate change are the next generation's major issues—or distinct opportunities for positive change, depending on your perspective and approach.

The SPGT team works with ILO constituents, UN agency staff, and other development partners and stakeholders that share our vision of a better, fairer, and more equal future of work.

We reach out to those groups and organizations that design and implement social and economic policies that affect all workers, with a special focus on high-risk workers. We believe that workers deserve to show up to a safe, healthy working environment, every day. And, we seek to organize more productive social dialogue, from negotiation to the simple exchange of information. The tripartite process is central to our vision, mission, and operations.

Code of Conduct

STAYING ON CAMPUS

The Turin Centre is an international training and learning institution guided by the values and principles of the United Nations Charter and the ILO Constitution. Respect for human rights, democracy, transparency, equality, diversity, and dialogue as a means of solving problems, underpins all our work and activities. The following tips are intended to ensure that your stay here at the campus is a pleasant, safe and rewarding learning experience.

A MULTILINGUAL ENVIRONMENT

One of the unique features of the campus is its multilingual dimension. Communicating across linguistic boundaries is an enriching experience but it can also be a challenging one. Misunderstandings can easily arise as certain nuances may be lost in translation. Communication problems can usually be overcome with courtesy and patience. If you do experience any problems, staff members are available to assist and promote good communications.

A MULTICULTURAL ENVIRONMENT

The campus is a multicultural environment and this diversity enriches the learning experience. Integral to this multicultural environment is respect and tolerance in relation to differences in: race, colour, gender, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, physical abilities, sexual orientation, age.

THE PHYSICAL ENVIRONMENT

The physical and natural environment of the campus is enhanced by:

- maintaining the common areas and the parkland clean and tidy,
- using the special containers for recycling paper, bottles, cans and plastic located in the coffee lounge, classrooms, coffee break points and hotel halls,
- returning any surplus documents to the classroom before leaving,
- saving water: low-flow fixtures are installed in all bathrooms,
- energy saving: lights automatically turn off and the heating/cooling system turns to low-energy mode when rooms are unoccupied,
- keeping doors and windows closed when air cooling and heating systems are in use.

HEALTH, SAFETY AND SECURITY

To ensure that the campus is secure, safe and healthy for all, the following measures have been introduced:

- no smoking inside buildings,
- prior authorization for any guests brought onto the campus,
- safes in rooms for safekeeping valuable personal items,
- zero tolerance for any form of sexual harassment,
- fire safety rules and evacuation plans posted in all rooms, classrooms and common areas on campus,
- trained, professional security staff responsible for security on campus 24h/7: in case of an emergency, collaborate with them and follow their instructions,
- small electric appliances (water boilers, irons, etc.) or candles should not be used in rooms, and
- food should not be brought into rooms.

I have read, understood and accept the above ITCILO code of conduct •

We strive to achieve a brighter future that works for everyone

We're looking for empathetic innovators. Mindful trailblazers. Those who are equally driven by heart and intellect, curiosity and logic. People who are eager to enlarge their perspectives, energize progress, and spark meaningful change for the future. If that sounds like you, you'll feel at home at TSD.

No two TSD students are alike. Every year, our Master's courses welcome recent university graduates seeking careers in development and professionals from the public sector—including the UN, EU, and NGOs—as well as private enterprises.

We transform learning. You reshape the world

At TSD, we promote a culture of experiential, results-based learning. That means you're encouraged to participate in class, apply your skills in research projects, and complete assignments through our online platform. Our Master's courses are blended and intensive. You'll work online, in the classroom, and in the field. Here's the plan of action:

Online

Start with preparatory modules on our online platform, perfect for participants with diverse entry profiles.

Classroom

Dive deeper into the issues through lectures, discussions, and team projects.

Project

Complete individual research with the help of your director, professors, and tutor.

Qualified students thrive at TSD, regardless of income

Tuition fees range from €8,500 to €9,000. Partial scholarships, funded by public and private sponsors, allow students from developing and transitional countries to focus on their studies, not their finances.

LET'S GET STARTED

Here's what we need from you:

- Bachelor's degree from a recognized university-level academic institution.
- Evidence of English proficiency.

STUDIED OUTSIDE OF ITALY?

You'll need to request a dichiarazione di valore—declaration of value—from the Italian embassy in the country where your diploma was issued. They'll ask for:

- Legalized bachelor's degree and transcript.
- Italian translation of bachelor's degree and transcript.

Bring the declaration, legalization, and translation with you to Turin.

Bureaucratic and administrative processes can be stressful. That's why we guide you, every step of the way.

Giuseppe Casale

Deputy Director of the ITCILO and Director of the Turin School of Development, Giuseppe Casale graduated from the University of Florence as a comparative labour lawyer. In 1985, he was awarded a Master in International Law and Economics by the Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies Washington D.C. He also holds a Ph.D., C.Phil. and M.A. in History of Law, Industrial and Employment Relations from the University of California Los Angeles (UCLA).

Before joining the International Labour Organization, Mr Casale lectured in comparative labour law and industrial relations at the University of Florence and at the University of Bari, and in international labour law at the University of Gorizia. He was a research fellow in international law at the Johns Hopkins University and teaching-fellow in the history of ideas, history of law, industrial and labour relations at UCLA.

Mr Casale joined the ILO in 1988 as a Labour Law and Labour Relations Specialist. In 1995, he was appointed Senior Specialist in Labour Law and Industrial Relations in the ILO Office in Budapest. He returned to Geneva in 2002 as Deputy Director of the Social Dialogue, Labour Law and Labour Administration Department. He was appointed Director of the Labour Administration and Inspection Programme in 2009.

In June 2014, he was appointed Senior Adviser to the Director of the Centre.

He is a member of several European and international research and scientific committees. He was the Secretary-General of the International Association of Industrial Relations (IIRA, now ILERA) and is now Secretary-General of the International Society of Labour and Social Security Law based in Geneva. He is the author of several books and articles on comparative and international labour law, industrial and employment relations.

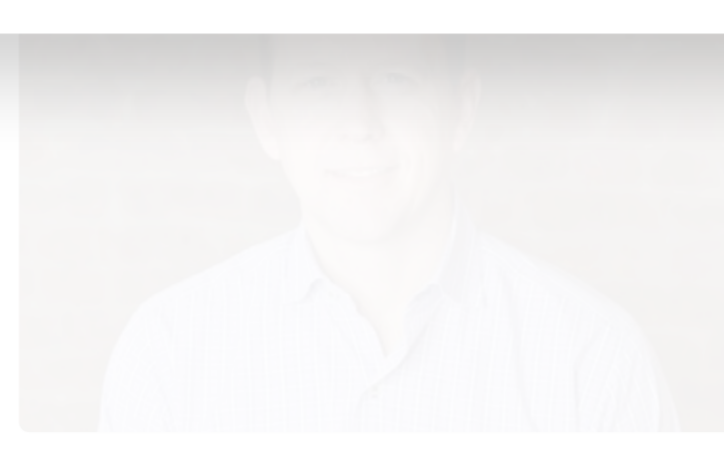

In 2015, he became Director of the Turin School of Development.

What our students say

We'll let our accomplished alumni take it from here.

“Excellent teaching methods, relevant training materials, highly competent and friendly professors, and a beautiful international class. I am now the coordinator of a consortium of 21 development NGOs based in the Piedmont region.”

— Andrea Micconi
MASTER'S COURSE IN MANAGEMENT OF DEVELOPMENT

“After being appointed as a district attorney in Beirut, I was eager to expand my knowledge of intellectual property rights. I remember with nostalgia the long days spent at the beautiful Turin campus, studying and exchanging experiences in a multinational context.”
